I have resided in Honeyville for nearly 10 years. I am currently serving on the Honeyville Town Council. I have previously served on the Honeyville Planning and Zoning. Agriculture in Honeyville is my full-time passion and occupation.

One common stigma I hear about farmers and ranchers is they are anti-development. While I have a strong passion for my lifestyle and the land I have stewardship over, I realize people need places to live and all businesses need land and resources to increase their business operations to maintain viability. These are all factors of a healthy economy. Honeyville has limited resources, mainly culinary water. I am committed to protecting and conserving the water we as citizens, have rights to. Smart growth and development are essential to maintain the positive quality of life Honeyville City has to offer. Honeyville City's ordinances and codes need to be followed for our town to continue to be the great community it has been for generations.
